

Species niche depends on trait values that evolve and vary across populations...

...and these traits are plastic and depend on the environmental conditions

